EARLY VIRGINIA HISTORY. THE KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN HORSE SHOE SIC JUVAT TRANSCENDERE MONTES.

The voyage of Captain John Smith and his fourteen con panions up the Potomac in the summer of 1608 revealed to them the fact that the lov, flit regions which everywhere bordered the waters of the Chesapeake did spirits and keep up their courage as they rode through the unexplored wilnot stretch interminably inland. A few derness on their errantry. They miles above the Indian town of Tohoga marched by short stages, as the way where now stands the city of Washi gton, their course was arrested by rapios and falls, and all about them were high ind rocky hills which shut them in like walls. The natives whom they there met, told them marvelous stories of a great mountain barrier many miles farther up the stream and beyind ther clear rivulets. The season of the year farther up the stream, and beyond that of still greater mountains whose tops was a pleasant one for the making of reached to the clouds, and still beyond these of a vast region of valleys and plans watered by wide rivers and lakes which poured their floods into a car off sea, and that the entire extent of the country from the seat to the west. of still greater mountains woose tops the country from the east to the west, and from the north to the south was anged by herds of buffalos and elk, and peopled by countless nations and tribes of their own race.

Smith was not prepared to explore the river and lands beyond the falls, and so leisurely descended its waters, levoting most of the summer to exemning its shores and obtaining informs ion cor cerning the number, names and trength of the tribes of Indians inhabiting them. In the autumn of the year he was again at Jamestown where he was welcomed by the colonists, who were more than ever convinced of his abilities and of his great useful ess to them as a counsellor and director in the beout a description of his expedition and made a m+p of the wonderful river upon who se waters he had sailed to accompany it, bo h of which are still extant. He related to the colonists the stories he had heard from the natives concerning the mou-t-CONSTIPATION Cured, Piles Prevented, by CONSTIPATION Lapanese Liver Pellets, the pract Liver and STOMACH REGULATOR and ELOOD PURIFIER. Packhorses accompanied with tents, an abundance of substantial provisions and "an extraordinary variety of liquors, such as Virginia red and white wines, Irish nequel augh, brandy, shrub, two sorts of run, champagne, Canary, cherry punch, cider, etc. So, while the "knights" had taken due care to arrange for boddy subsistence, they had not been unmindful of something to exhibitate their arriving and keep up their courage as brief records he has left us which, how-ever, afford interesting glimpses of the progress of the expedition :

August 27th.—Got our horses shod at Germania and our tents ready. 29.h .- All things having ranged we set out from the German settlement on our intended journey. At five in the afternoon the governor gave orders to encamp on a small stream three miles from the place of starting, which we called Expedition run, and here we lay all night. This first encampment was named Bevery camp, in honor of the historian of Vir ginia, one of the gentlemen of our party. We made great fires, supped and drank good punch. 30th-In the morning about 7 of the clock we were aroused by the trum pet's call. At 9 we sent our servants and bargage forward and we remained because two of the governor's horsehad strayed. At half-past 2 we got the horses. At 3 we mounted and at half-past 4 we came up with our bag, age at a small river three miles on the way, which we called Mine run, because there was an appearance of a miles farther on we came to anothsmall stream which we called Mountain run, where we camped for the night We found good pa-turage for our horses and venison in abundance for ourselves.

we again set out and after proceeding five miles came upon the upper part of the Kappahannock river. Shot a deer from my horse on the way. Five miles the control of the Kappahannock river. Shot a deer from my horse on the way. Five miles the control of the cont further on we crossed the same river and two miles furthur fell in with a bear, which we killed. Killed s veral more deer and at night camped on the Rappahannock. From our eucampment we could plainly see the Appa lachian hills; we made large fires, pitched our tents, cut boughs to lie up on, had good I quor, and at ten went to sleep. We always kept a sentry at the governor's door. This we called Smith's camp. Made this day fourteen

September 1st .- At 8 we mounted our horses and made the first five miles of our way through a very pleas-ant plain, which lies where the Rappahannock river forks. I saw there the largest timber, the finest and deepest mould and the best grass I ever had We had some of our baggage put seen. out of order and some of our company dismounted by hornets singing the horses. This was some hindrance and did a little damage, but afforded a great deal of diversion. We cised the horses as well as the men. Saw two foxes and killed several deer. About 5 o'clock came to a run of water to relate, more than a century was to pass by before the coming of the man and the time for the accomplishment of the delayed object. Twenty-four shires or counties had been established. Jamestown was in its dotage and no longer the provincial capital and Smith had been sleeping for nearly ninety years in a London church yard.

Alexander Spottswood was sent over in 1710 with a royal commission from Oneen Anne to be governor. It was down a tree, but it being Sunday, we did not try to kill any animal. Encamped at five o'clock by a stream we called White Oak riv-
